Course Description:

This course introduces the key writers, genres and movements from the immediate post-WWII period to the end of the twentieth century. Students consider a range of literary texts placed in relevant historical and cultural contexts and investigate how the writing of the period responds to changes in post-war and contemporary culture such as the decline of empire and the migrant experience, the impact of feminism, the development of media society and consumer culture. The legacies of Modernism, the challenges posed to the tradition of realism, as well as a variety of experiments and innovations in forms are explored, as students engage with the critical debates and emerging theories from the period.

Prerequisites: ARW 4195
Aims and Objectives:

- To provide a critical, historical, literary, and cultural framework for the understanding and analysis of post-war and contemporary British literature, and to encourage critical reading and research in the subject
- To explore key authors, texts, and themes of the period, and to consider these in key literary, theoretical, and historical contexts
- To encourage a critical appreciation of the ways in which British literature operates in the decline of Empire, and to explore a variety of intercultural and intertextual approaches
- To develop the critical skills with which to analyse, assess, and respond to postmodern generic experimentation.

Programme Outcomes:
5Ai; 5Aii; 5Bi; 5Bii; 5Ci; 5Cii; 5Ci; 5Dii

Learning Outcomes:

By the end of this course, successful students should be able to:
- Demonstrate in-depth knowledge of a representative range of post-1945 British literary texts and genres within their historical and cultural contexts
- Demonstrate a detailed understanding of the salient features and approaches to literary realism, postmodernism, feminism, post-colonialism
- Use appropriate critical skills and independent judgment to debate texts, perform a close reading of a passage, and undertake a comparative analysis of at least two texts
- Deliver work with limited supervision demonstrating the capacity to evaluate their own work within the context of relevant critical approaches

Indicative Content:

Students will be invited to relate their study of individual authors and works to questions about gender, class, race, and national identity, and about belief and authority, as well as issues of canonicity.
