Course Description:

The course introduces students to the history of economic thought and ideas. The course covers the time period of the early days until today's post-financial crisis period. This course is of value to students who pursue a course of study in business, finance or economics as well as in other disciplines as it covers a wide range of issues including sociology, political philosophy and international relations. The course intends to provide a wide perspective of ideas rather than a more closely focused presentation of standard and mainstream theory as provided in Economics courses at higher levels.

Prerequisites:

None

Aims and Objectives:

- To enable an understanding of historic and current economic debates
- To identify the discipline of economics as a social science
- To engage in a pluralistic perspective of Economics
- To emphasise the relevance of economic analysis
- To further the understanding of commercial developments on the basis of economic thought
- To develop critical thinking skills
